Reflection

'Jesus, teach us to live by faith and share in love, so that we may be free of cloying comforts and the protective padding of material goods. Teach us to accept without embarrassment the help that others give us. But help us to give ourselves in return, finding a family in all who need to hear your word. Risen Lord, who comforted your apostles when they had laboured without success throughout the night, show us the true worth of the human techniques we employ. Do not allow us to despise them, for even the miraculous draught would be impossible without a net. But neither let their constant use enslave us. Remind us rather that your presence is the power that changes hearts.'
