Just a Thought:

Of all the people who will ever cross our paths in life, there is one in particular who is relentlessly critical of our human efforts. The task master supreme alias the man in the mirror never misses an opportunity to remind us of our faults, failings and imperfections. From time to time we need to stop in our tracks, take stock and have a little chat with that mirror remembering that accepting our limitations and our human inadequacies is a must if we are to enjoy life to the full. Being able to laugh at ourselves too from time to time instead of self-berating is a good place to start.

Life is too short and getting shorter with each passing day to be always serious. Have fun and enjoy it without expectation. So eat wisely, sleep well, laugh often, pray daily and surround yourself with true friends and positive people. If you smile at the task master you are guaranteed a smile of approval in return. With renewed confidence, bless yourself and say "Well done to me for now" and charge ahead.
